I managed to build the basic layout of my site by making it look like a simple wiki page, I made buttons for all the characters in the main page and above those are other buttons like the Main page which if you click on while on any of the other pages will take you to the main page, the Characters button which is actually a drop down menu with all of the characters names to lead you directly to their info page and a contact us page where I put in the email along with 2 simple text boxes one for names and one for any messages which is optional, then you would be able to send the email with by pressing the submit button. The main page is very simple has buttons leading to all five of the characters pages and at the bottom of the page like all the other pages it also has links to Instagram, TikTok, twitter, Patreon, YouTube and Facebook at the bottom of the page.

When you click on the buttons leading to the characters from either the dropdown menu or the main page screen you are led to the characters page which are made similarly to each other as they each have a fact about them under where their picture is except for one of them who has a different picture style due to the drawing being a bit older but that does not change much. I changed the idea for what the site was going to be as I removed the entire shop segment of it as it would have been a bit too complicated for me to do as I had already struggled with just the informational segment of the site so I instead went all out to make a site more informational and less of a store.

If I had to add anything new to the site however I would add the online store segment and make people able to access the store to make the site more than just a wiki page, I could also add a chat feature where people could speak to each other about the characters or even a comment section on each of the characters because that seems like it might be a good idea
